A PROJECT OF MY PRECIOUS LIFE

DINESH MOHAN

LIVE IN TRIUMPH is a shout out to Freedom!

The 'Freedom Fashion' concept was born out of Pastor Anuradha Das's deep-rooted desire to create change in society. Recognizing the need to address underlying issues such as self-doubt, depression, addiction, and domestic violence, she sought to harness the power of fashion to illuminate the path to triumph

Having experienced her own emotional breakdown in 2004, Anuradha Das founded My Precious Life, a life coaching company that focuses on healing and personal growth. Her journey inspired her to extend her impact beyond coaching, leading to the creation of LIT Fashion Event.

In 2019, when the world was struck by the COVID-19 pandemic and the untimely demise of the talented Bollywood actor, Sushant Singh Rajput, Anuradha Das was faced with deep contemplation on how to tackle the underlying issues of depression and mental health within society. Amidst this challenging period, she conceived a powerful vision for driving positive change and making a difference.

Freedom Fashion has been organizing fashion events since 2021, aiming to shed light on neglected and unspoken aspects of human mental health. The initiative has garnered immense support from influential personalities like Fashion Model and celebrity Mr. Dinesh Mohan, Mr. Sushant Kumar, along with friends such as Ms. Kirti Parasar and Ms. Cindy Pereira. Notable organizations like Inner Wheel (Delhi) and Rising Eagle Productions LLC have also joined forces with Anuradha to bring her vision to life. As we step into the third year with LIT, the momentum and support for this cause continue to grow exponentially.

The Common Man with a Great Heart

Meet Ranjan Kumar Das, a social work powerhouse with an unwavering commitment to serving the community. Since 2015, he has been actively involved in various initiatives, leaving a profound impact on the lives of thousands.

During the Covid-19 pandemic, Ranjan and his team tirelessly provided food and water to those in need, ensuring that no one went hungry. They also played a crucial role in vaccination drives, administering vaccines to 400-500 people daily. Ranjan's efforts in coordinating with government vaccination programs were instrumental in making a positive difference.

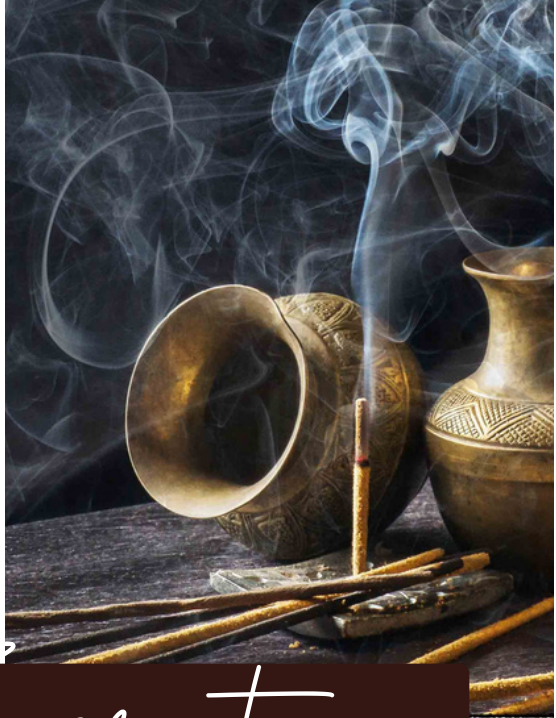

His dedication to education is commendable. In slum areas, Ranjan runs a tuition center for around 100 children, offering not just academic support but also promoting health, hygiene, and etiquette. His goal of getting 10-15 slum children into government schools each year is transforming the outlook of these communities.

Ranjan Kumar Das is an epitome of service and integrity. His selfless contributions have made him a beacon of hope and a true inspiration for all. # ANONYMOUS SPEAKS...

A TRUE STORY OF SUNIL, A VICTIM OF DOMESTIC VIOLENCE

I was 7 years old, living with my only sister in a nuclear family. Despite having a large extended family, our uncles reside in different places due to their jobs. My sister and I used to enjoy ourselves greatly, even though problems existed between my parents at home. This might sound unusual, but it's the truth. As children, our games felt like festivals. After returning from school, we would immerse ourselves in local games. However, beneath the surface, a sense of fear would creep in every day when the clock struck at 8:00 pm. This fear was due to the impending return of my dad from work.

Believe me, the level of physical abuse my mother endured, occurring almost two or three times a week, is beyond imagination. He would utilize all his strength to subject my mother to beatings. His cruelty seemed almost like a source of energy for him, a kind of twisted motivation. I want to emphasize that my dad wasn't in that negative state all the time. There were moments when he cared for my mom (I've witnessed his concern for her), and he genuinely loved us as well. Both at his workplace and within our community, he garnered respect due to his public behavior. Regrettably, the darker aspects of his actions behind closed doors remained hidden from others. The underlying issues stemmed from his circle of friends, his struggles with alcohol, and the pervasive concept of masculinity deeply entrenched in the men of Bihar and Uttar Pradesh, particularly the belief that men should command unwavering reverence from women.

His battle with chronic alcoholism became a prominent feature of our lives, with alcohol consumption almost becoming a daily ritual.

This struggle, combined with his skewed perception of gender dynamics, cast a gloomy shadow over our household. Amid sporadic displays of affection, the constant fear of his potential explosive episodes overshadowed any hope of sustained harmony. The pivotal moment came about through a seemingly harmless disagreement concerning an ironed dress – an insignificant catalyst that set off a horrifying chain of events. My father's savage attack on my mother drove her to a desperate measure – she set herself on fire. This heart-wrenching incident resulted in the loss of both their lives. In his attempt to rescue her, my father too became engulfed in flames, leaving us utterly devastated, shattered, and orphaned. The already dire situation was compounded by the lack of prompt medical attention, as the medical facilities in Bihar were deplorable, with cows and buffaloes tied up there, showcasing the abysmal state of healthcare in our hometown.

Following the loss of our parents, life took a sharp and unexpected turn. Moving in with my maternal uncle's family brought forth new emotional challenges. Their detached treatment ignited a yearning to escape the pain, at times even contemplating the unthinkable. However, amid the darkness, my maternal uncle emerged as a guiding force. His unwavering dedication to our education illuminated a glimmer of hope. Enrolling us in a local school, provided us with an opportunity to forge a brighter future. Through his persistent efforts, we began the arduous process of rebuilding our lives. Yet, the scars of our tumultuous past continue to linger.

The domestic violence that we bore witness to has left an indelible mark, shaping our perceptions of the world, influencing our relationships, and tinging our outlook on life with a mixture of caution and resilience.

The aftermath left my sister and me in the care of relatives. Their support played a pivotal role in ensuring our education. During my college years, seeking financial aid from them was met with disdain, labeling me a "beggar" for my aspirations. My sister's marriage introduced her to another variant of gender hierarchy, where she became the unfortunate recipient of emotional and physical abuse. Do you think I should tell my sister to leave her husband and live her life all alone? According to me it's an impossible event as to what will happen to her kids and she is not educated too. Our childhood has been entirely lost. Those who once supported us are now demanding their money back. During family discussions, if I don't comply with their desires, they label me as a 'beggar,' insinuating that I've resorted to collecting money from various sources. My maternal aunt used to refer to me as the 'Pig's Child,' and she remains a significant source of my traumatic memories from childhood, a pain that still haunts me. She frequently served me stale food, and there were instances when she instructed me to eat from the basin where leftover food had been discarded.

Throughout those years, I witnessed people being extraordinarily cruel and insincere in their actions. The enduring impact of my father's domestic violence has left us in a perpetual state of turmoil. Even if I secure a job now and manage to lead a respectable life, the initial days will still be marked by the heavy burden of education loans and the loans provided by my relatives. My sister remains trapped in the same situation, as marriage continues to be dictated by baseless superstitions and traditional beliefs upheld by men in our society.
